Project Title: Korean Calligraphy

In my Typograhy II studio, I recently did an indepth project about the evolution of Korean Typography. My research included this Wikipedia page and I thought it was fitting to create a microsite about it. I'd like to build this site as multiple pages, rather than a long, single page website. A site navigation vertically would be ideal but across the top would work as well. I think there is just enough content and photography to build out short individual pages.
